Delaware County's 2018/2019 Cold Weather Plan

Multiple agencies prepared to assist residents in winter weather conditions

Delaware County Council reminds residents that various County agencies offer additional support and resources to the homeless, elderly and vulnerable residents when harsh cold, snow, and freezing conditions take place during the winter season. When weather conditions pose a threat to individuals who are homeless, elderly or medically fragile, a network of agencies works to help residents obtain shelter, food, and assistance.

“Several of our County agencies are prepared to help residents cope with extreme weather conditions, from sheltering the homeless to reaching out to the elderly,” said Chairman John McBlain. “We want to remind our residents about these services should they need assistance or if they know of someone who needs help. No one should suffer in the cold without shelter or heat.”

The following Delaware County agencies assist people year-round and also during extreme weather conditions:

- The Delaware County Division of Adult and Family Services and the Office of Behavioral Health partners with various agencies to offer additional services through the Homeless Services Coalition of Delaware County, a group of 90 individuals and organizations dedicated to providing services to the homeless. They also provide a winter shelter directory that is distributed to police, municipalities, school districts, and other officials. In addition, the office publishes a Survival Guide to Homeless Services that details a variety of services including shelters, housing, meals, treatment programs, and government services.
